

Developing Unconventional Gas (DUG) Conference and Exhibition 2011 Show Report

Resource plays will be the name of the game for at least the next 10 years, attendees learned at the 6th annual Developing Unconventional Gas (DUG) Conference & Exhibition. Some 2,400 people attended the April event in Fort Worth.

Speakers highlighted business development, the latest technologies, and M&A trends in unconventional plays. The business is changing, they said, as the line between so-called unconventional or shale plays and traditional plays is blurring fast. Operators are now applying multi-stage fracs and horizontal drilling to more traditional plays, and they are seeing enhanced production as a result.

“Anytime you put out a lateral and frac it, you’re going to help a reservoir...,” said Randy King, managing director of Bank of America Merrill Lynch. He singled out the Granite Wash, Cotton Valley, Mississippi Lime, Cleveland sand and Bone Spring as examples of older plays that are being revived today by using shale-type technology.

The success of North American shale assets continues to attract investor attention from here and abroad, and national oil companies are still looking for deals. Many assets have changed hands, often priced at higher multiples of production than other assets on the market, speakers said.

Attendees learned that the amount of capital required to develop a shale play is enormous, and that the industry has often underestimated the amount of capital needed. This will lead to more significant joint-ventures being formed, although they may not be quite as large as the JVs formed in the last two years.

Save the Date

Energy supply has entered a fundamentally new age. Advanced technologies have unlocked a wealth of oil and gas supplies. A remarkable transformation is surging across North America and the world, and changing the global political and economic landscapes in its wake.

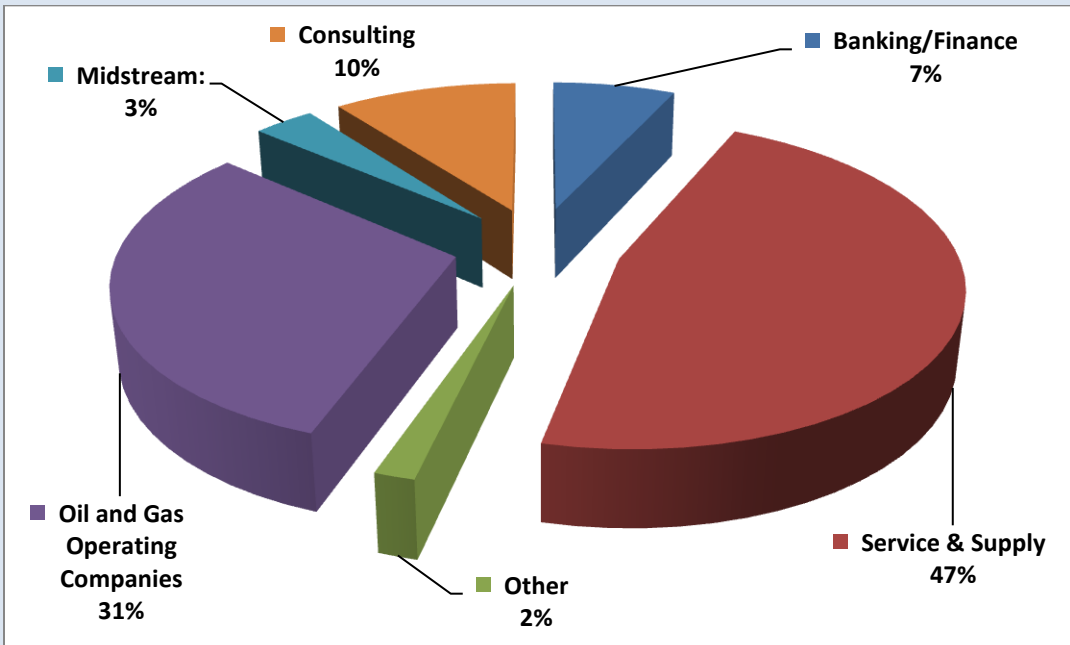

The 2012 DUG Conference & Exhibition will provide a broad update on the shale gas plays throughout North America and beyond. As drillers continue to explore for gas by revisiting known land formations, the industry is flourishing even at a time of low prices.

On behalf of Hart Energy, we thank all those who have participated in DUG the past six years and we invite you back next year. Mark your calendars for the 7th Annual DUG Conference. The 2012 dates are April 16 – 18, at the Fort Worth Conference Center.
